

SUFFRAGE LIVE QUESTION AT MEETING

Ballot for Women Voted Down at Co-Operative League Session.

Though it was expected that there would be arguments against woman's suffrage at the meeting of the Manoa section of the Woman's Cooperative League yesterday afternoon, none developed. A number of anti-suffragists were present. About fifty members of the league met at the home of Mrs. P. C. Steere to listen to a talk by Mrs. E. M. Rhodes of Seattle. Before Mrs. Rhodes' address Mrs. Steere said:

"I for one do not believe in woman's suffrage in Hawaii."

In her talk Mrs. Rhodes said that women objected to going to the ballot box but she emphasized the fact that in clearing up a city a woman's vote counts more than the individual woman. She also said that while a large number of women were gathering funds for homes for fallen women and others of that type, the homes when erected would never remedy the cause for their necessity. She also dwelt upon the old idea men have towards women. They look upon them as creatures to be protected but they do not always protect them.

Western Man Liberal.

"The men in the West, however," said Mrs. Rhodes, "are willing to grant women the vote because the women have fought with them shoulder to shoulder in the business world. I smile at the men in Honolulu for they seem to have the idea that woman is a fluffy Ruffian sort of person that has to be looked after."

Having been an advocate of suffrage for many years and having been active in the fight for suffrage in Washington Mrs. Rhodes was able to give the women of Manoa a pretty fair knowledge of what it has done in Seattle. The question that seems to be bothering the women is whether or not the women of Honolulu are ready for the vote. One woman asked if the Hawaiian woman would vote any more intelligently than her husband. The suggestion was also made that many of the white women would not take enough interest in suffrage to go to the polls and cast their ballot.

These questions were easily answered by Mrs. Rhodes. She said that if the women wanted to have good government they would have to vote. When it was remarked that the women did not know anything of the candidates that were put up for office and had no way of finding out, Mrs. Rhodes said that she would give a vote the men who are candidates will be the first to volunteer information concerning their own policy and tell all the unfavorable things they know about him running for the same office.

Mrs. Dowsett Speaks.

Mrs. J. M. Dowsett president of the local suffrage organization answered for the Hawaiian women. She said that from the beginning the Hawaiian woman had been the voter but during the last few years the men had broken away and had voted as they wished or as they were told to do by some other man. Mrs. Dowsett said that when the women of Hawaii are given the vote they will stand for the right.

After Mrs. Dowsett's address, "For Suffrage," "Against Suffrage," and "Undecided" was circulated. The canvass showed that the women undecided on suffrage run in the lead, the anti-suffragists following closely and there were but few who stood for votes for women. There are to be two more meetings when this subject will be discussed. In two weeks the speakers will argue against suffrage and at the next meeting a summary of the different speeches will be given.

The next meeting will be held at the Library of Hawaii if the Cooperative League can secure permission for the use of one of the vacant rooms at that place.

MUCH WORK AHEAD FOR FEDERAL GRAND JURY

The special venire of ten men who were selected to fill the vacancies in the federal grand jury until the close of the term in October, will be sworn by Judge Doie in the United States district court this morning at ten o'clock. The new grand jurors are:

Bruce Cartwright, Jr., P. C. Atherton, H. C. Carter, D. Howard Hitchcock, Norman E. Gedge, H. Williams, Percy H. Nottage, Seeley I. Shaw, Stanley Stephenson and Duke J. Kahanamoku.

The jury is expected to return indictments in certain long-standing federal cases early next week. "We have a number of men in jail for offenses against the regulations of the postoffice and other federal departments," said Assistant United States District Attorney Bittling yesterday. "We have been holding these men for some time, and we are in hopes that the grand jury will clear up these federal matters first. After that will come the more recent cases, like the Perreira and Schreiber smuggling charges."

Charles Schreiber, former baker on the Wilhelmina, who is charged with attempting to smuggle four tons of unstamped opium into Hilo, was released on the furnishing of a $750 bond to the United States marshal's office Saturday afternoon. The bond was secured from the United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company of Baltimore.

Death Comes to One Who Gave Life to Service of the Friendless

MISS ROSE DAVISON,
Who died yesterday.

Miss Rosalie C. K. Davison died at five minutes past four o'clock yesterday afternoon at her home in Manoa Valley. Her death was momentarily expected for some days.

Acute illness, which continued during the past year, compelled her to give up her active duties as agent of the humane society in this city before the close of 1912. The ravages of disease compelled Miss Davison to seek rest and health in California, where she went in February, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. A. P. Taylor, remaining two months. Feeling that she was nearing the end she returned to Honolulu a few weeks ago.

Her splendid constitution and vitality warded off death as long as this was possible. The near end was seen when four days ago her condition was such she failed to recognize relatives and friends who crowded to her bedside. She sank into a comatose state and on Saturday became unconscious. After thirty-six hours, still struggling to ward off the inevitable end, she passed away peacefully.

Funeral Arrangements. A private funeral service will be held at the residence in Manoa Valley at ten o'clock this morning for relatives only. The public service will be held at Central Union Church at three o'clock this afternoon. Dr. Doremus Seauder, pastor, officiating. The second service will be held in accord with the wishes of the officers of the humane society and women associated with other public institutions.

It is expected many school teachers and pupils will be present, as for some years Miss Davison was connected with the department of public instruction, as agent and assistant secretary. Following the services at Central Union Church, the body will be cremated. The interment in the Nuania Cemetery will be private.

Rosalie Compton, Kahanui-o-Kalanikaumahu (Kahanui-the Christian) Davison, was born in Honolulu September 22, 1868, the daughter of the late Benoni Richmond Davison, superintendent of the first United States marine hospital in Honolulu, and also first superintendent of the insane asylum. Her mother, after the death of Mr. Davison, married A. A. Montano.

Descendant of Liloua. Through her mother she was a descendant of Liloua, first king of Hawaii, and the great great granddaughter of the high chief Mahalo and Kahanui (W), whose daughter Makaloa married Kaha, the chief of Awini, whose sister Kahanui was the foster mother of Kahanui the First.

Abia, the daughter of Kaha and Makaloa married Captain George Beckley, an English sea captain, and the first military commander of the Hawaiian fort which was built at the foot of Fort street nearly a century ago. He was made a chief by Kamehameha, and is also credited with the designing of the first Hawaiian merchant flag.

Through her grandfather, Abraham Henry Fayerweather, she was the great granddaughter of Rev. James Richards, one of the five young men who became famous at the memorable "haystack meeting" at Williams College, where was laid the foundation of foreign missions and through which missionaries were afterward sent to Hawaii.

Through her father she was related to the Richmonds, Comptons and Davisons of England, one of the latter having been a secretary to Queen Elizabeth.

Miss Davison first attended St. Andrew's Priory, of which Sister Bertha was the head and Sisters Albertina and Beatrice, teachers. She afterwards attended the Fort street school under Prof. M. M. Scott and finished there with honors. She attended Oahu College in the class with Mrs. Walter Frear, A. M. Brown, Horace Chamberlain, Fred Whitney and many others.

She opened the first English school in Manoa Valley for the government, and after teaching there for a few years entered the office of the board of education as school agent and later became assistant secretary of the board under the late Alan T. Atkinson, then the superintendent of the public schools of the Territory. During her incumbency she was selected as commissioner of education to represent Hawaii at the Buffalo exposition.

When the humane society was reorganized by the women of Honolulu Miss Davison was appointed humane officer and during the regime of Sheriff Curtis P. Ingersoll received a police commission as humane officer for the department, serving two years. She was active in her duties as humane officer until several months ago when her illness became so acute that she was reluctantly compelled to give only a brief time to looking after dumb animals and ill-treated children.

Friend of Dumb Animals.

Love of horses and dogs was one of the deepest passions of her life and from childhood she was devoted to their best interests. She was one of the finest horsewomen in the Islands and until a few years ago always drove a span in a light carriage, being an expert whip.

The same love of horses prompted several director-general's of floral parades to ask her to assume charge of the parade riders' section, one of the most attractive and unique in each parade. Even for the last parade in February she evinced the deepest interest and regretted that she was physically unable to assemble the riders and lead them in the parade.

As humane officer she was out early and late visiting the stables and barns of owners of all nationalities here, making regular inspections, taking horses and mules in the streets, compelling owners to change harnesses to suit animals, dropping check reins and requiring that stable and barn accommodations be brought up to a better standard. She always held the opinion that an ounce of prevention was worth a pound of cure, and rarely made arrests when other means would effect results in favor of dumb animals. In all this work she had the friendly cooperation of animal owners.

Devoted to Children.

Her same devotion to the helpless led her into the field for children who were ill treated at their homes. Drunken fathers and mothers received no pity from Miss Davison and from them she would take children, pass them through the courts and find foster parents for them, or place them in institutions such as the Salvation Army Home.

Children of mothers of many races sought her to give homeless children to them. Hardly a day passed but that some woman did not visit her at her home to ask her to find a child that needed a good home. She also assisted in the work of the associated charities, for those who were incorrigible Miss Davison always resorted to the courts and sent them to the Girls' Industrial School, and when girls came out of this institution her same desire to aid led her to find employment for them.

During the taking of the 1900 census Miss Davison was an assistant to the late Alan T. Atkinson, who was census superintendent. During the cholera outbreak Miss Davison was an able worker.

One of the women prominent in the humane society work, and who was one of her most ardent supporters, said of Miss Davison only a few days ago: "Rose endeared herself in the hearts of the high and the low, the rich and the poor, irrespective of nationality, and people in trouble never hesitated to go to Rose because they were always sure of help."

SPRECKELSHERS SCORE VICTORY BY DECISION

Supreme Court Sets Aside
Decision of Judge Cooper
in Important Suit

Entirely reversing Circuit Judge Henry R. Cooper's decision of last January, when the will of Claus Spreckels, the deceased sugar magnate, was overruled, the opinion of the supreme court of California overruled, and John D. and Adolph B. Spreckels allowed to share equally with the other three children in the distribution of the $500,000 estate situated in Hawaii, the supreme court of the Territory yesterday morning handed down a decision which holds the last testament of the sugar king valid and ordered judgment against the two sons ignored in the will.

But the adverse decision of the highest court in the Territory will not put the quietus on the last hopes of the two brothers, according to their attorney, Robbins B. Anderson of the firm of Prosser, Anderson & Moore. The case, as it affects the Hawaiian properties, will probably be carried to the Supreme Court of the United States, possibly within thirty days.

"While the territorial supreme court did not follow the exact reasoning of the supreme court of California," said Mr. Anderson last night, "it reached the same conclusion, essentially."

The supreme court of the Territory arrived at its conclusion by an implicit following of the precise wording of the will of Claus Spreckels. It held "that the words in a will are presumed to have been used in their primary and ordinary sense; that of two reasonable modes of construction, one of which will lead to intestacy and the other to a valid disposition, the latter will be accepted and that an estate interest given is to be regarded as vested unless it clearly appears that a contingent estate or interest was intended."

Contention of Plaintiffs.

The attorneys for John D. and Adolph B. Spreckels based their claim to share in the estate on the grounds that the wording of the will made an intestacy contingent as to the real estate in Hawaii. They held that it would require an indefinite length of time to partition the estate according to the terms of the will. Such a period, they claimed, would make the estate illegal under the law against perpetuities. And if the provisions of the will were thus rendered illegal and void, John D. and Adolph B. Spreckels were entitled as direct descendants of the sugar magnate to share pro rata with the other three children in the estate.

This contention was held invalid by the supreme court of California. The brothers then transferred their activities to the courts of the Territory in an effort to acquire title to a share in the $500,000 estate located here. Last summer two suits were instituted by them against the direct beneficiaries of the will and against C. Brewer & Company. The result court, in a jury-waived trial before Judge Henry R. Cooper, granted the opponents of the will an equal share with the heirs in the division of the property. The decision of the supreme court yesterday vacates the verdicts of the lower court and favors the direct devisees of the will, ordering judgment against John D. and Adolph B. Spreckels.

California Case Not Affected.

It is said this decision will not affect in any way the ruling of the supreme court of California on a similar case, Estate of Spreckels, 162 Cal. 559.

The high court of the Territory felt that it ought to follow the decision of the California supreme court "because it is intrinsically sound and just." But this was not allowable as the law of the Golden State materially differs from the law of the Territory. There the creation of a trust to convey real property to beneficiaries is prevented by statutory provisions. Therefore, the territorial supreme court held that "the construction and effect of this will, and the validity of its provisions with respect to the land in dispute must be determined with reference to the law of Hawaii, and this court must examine the will to ascertain the intention of the testator and give effect to that intention if it be not repugnant to the law of this jurisdiction irrespective of what may have been held in California."

Appeal Is Probable.

There is said to be one loophole at the poor, irrespective of nationality, and people in trouble never hesitated to go to Rose because they were always sure of help."

Beloved by Urchins.

Often times a woman or a girl in trouble telephoned to Miss Davison's home at night and no matter what the hour Miss Davison hitched her horse and drove down into the parlance of the city to give a helping hand. Hardly a school child in the country, whether white or brown but knew Miss Davison and the boys always took off their hats to her as she passed them.

"This city owed a lot to Miss Davison and I believe it was a better community for her highhearted work," said another of her women friends. "She was generous to a fault and would give her last dollar to help any one in trouble."

Miss Davison leaves surviving her, besides her mother, Mrs. Montano, two sisters, Mrs. Albert P. Taylor and Mrs. Margaret D. Brown, and a brother, H. P. Davison.

lowed the losers in yesterday's decision, according to John D. and Adolph B. Spreckels' attorneys. That is in the law of the Territory covering the carrying of final appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States. In California, the case as it affects property situated in that State, is settled for good and all by the law there, which holds that a State supreme court decision is binding and final, without admittance of any legal right to appeal to the United States tribunal. Here, in the Territory, however, a decision of the supreme court of the Islands may be questioned once again in the United States Supreme Court.

That is just what the disinherited members of the Spreckels family, according to the will, are supposed to be contemplating. It will mean the reopening of litigation pertaining to lands and other properties situated in the Territory. But, at best, it can in no manner or form affect the larger estate in California or the provisions of the supreme court of that State, it is claimed.

PARKER RANCH SEEKS TO HAVE LEASE RENEWED

Ten Thousand Dollars Per Year
Offer Made for Area of 50,000 Acres.

Formal application has been made to the commissioner of public lands, by the Parker Ranch officials, for a renewal of the lease, which expires July 1, on the government lands of Puna, Waimea, Kawaihine and other sections of the big cattle ranch on Hawaii. The information was given out by Governor Frear yesterday.

Over 50,000 acres of pasture and mountain lands are embraced in the area covered by the old thirty-year leases which expire Saturday. The Parker people offer in the neighborhood of $10,000 yearly rental for these lands, said Governor Frear. "This would make it an average of about twenty cents per acre. The offer is not made in a lump sum. From ten to twenty cents per acre is offered for the pasture lands, while for other tracts the annual rental offered per acre varies from ten to twelve and a half and twenty-five to fifty cents."

The water for the upper Hamakua ditch is collected from the mountainous Puna section and is considered a very valuable territorial asset. Up to a week ago nothing had been said or done by the Parker Ranch officials as to whether they wanted to renew the lease or not and the territorial authorities were nonplused over this apparent show of lack of interest by the parties most concerned.

The publication of the story in The Advertiser over a week ago revived the question and the Parker interests sat up and took notice, with the receipt of a communication from the commissioner of public lands also bearing on the subject, the formal application for a renewal of the lease has now been made.

The application will be considered by the land board at its next meeting which, although the date has not been announced yet, may be held the latter part of this week.

TRULY RURAL VIEW OF BILLBOARD FIGHT

Garden Island.—If the strenuous fight against the billboard proposition which is in progress in Honolulu is simply one wherein an advertising medium is endeavoring to freeze out a competitor, the people are being used as tools in a mighty power case. The billboard nuisance—if such it can be considered—is of no consequence on Kauai, and, being in the advertising business ourselves, we would naturally feel opposed to having "our beautiful scenery" marred with unsightly, gaudy boards. However, there seems but little need in the public taking such drastic measures as it would appear the Honolulu people are doing. In so much as some of our leading business houses have been ardent patrons of the Honolulu billboard, it seems a little unfair for these same firms to discontinue their patronage with an abruptness which would spell ruin to a firm which has so much at stake. Mr. Frazier should be notified of the impending discontinuation of the business, that he might sort of shape his resources accordingly. His is a legitimate business, and, being such, should not be attacked in any suffragette form—which is being done at present. There seems so many other things which the people of Honolulu should do towards making "beautiful Honolulu" more beautiful, that when they whip the billboard out of existence we hope they will enlist the assistance of the Morning Bladder in their attempt to continue the improvement. It is a toss-up as to which is the most unsightly to the visitor—the billboards, or the city's streets which are constantly being torn up for the laying of pipes, etc. No, dear old Honolulu will not have put on the finishing touch by a long shot, when she has done away with the "objectionable" billboards.

WAIKANE WHARF FINISHED.

Superintendent of Public Works J. W. Caldwell issued a statement yesterday morning to the effect the new Waikane landing had been completed by the contractors, the Lord Young Engineering Company, and that the landing is now ready for business. The cost of the Waikane landing to the Territory was $6890.

"The landing has been practically completed by the Territory," said J. W. Caldwell yesterday. "The work was well done and I am more than satisfied with the job."
